

RIDE EUROPE

ROUTE 1. STAGE 2. DAY 5.

DAVOS TO BOLZANO SWITZERLAND AND ITALY

APPROXIMATELY 120 MILES (200KM)

The final day is a fitting finale to this stage and offers two choices: take the Stelvio Pass for one of the most famous and dramatic alpine rides in Europe or bypass it for a slightly more direct route. The day begins with the Flüela Pass at 2,384m, where you're offered a thrilling mix of tight switchbacks and wider, sweeping curves (please note that this pass is closed during the winter months). It's a heady ride that descends into the picturesque Engadin Valley towards Zernez. From here, you'll ride the Ofenpass and Umbrail Pass, where you'll cross into Italy and the iconic Stelvio Pass.

The Stelvio is a spectacular yet notoriously difficult pass in the Italian Alps. It is famous for being the highest mountain pass in Italy and the second highest in Europe (open from May to November). The route is highly challenging and strictly recommended for experienced riders rather than novices. The descent features 48 legendary switchbacks, with 88 hairpin bends in total. From the pass, it's a scenic run into Bolzano.

The historic town is compact and walkable, with colourful buildings, medieval arcades and the lively town square, Piazza Walther. Here there are outdoor cafés, shops and the cathedral (Duomo di Bolzano). One of Bolzano's biggest attractions is the South Tyrol Museum of Archaeology, the resting place of Ötzi the Iceman, a naturally preserved man who lived 5,300 years ago and was discovered in the Ötztal Alps by hikers in 1991. The museum displays his remains, clothing and equipment, offering remarkable insights into prehistoric life.

WHERE TO STAY
